

Document 1: a british national breakfast, by Hollie McNish they start the day with a small glass of orange juice bought at sainsbury's, south african produce mugs emblazoned with our german-bred queen ..... sip english breakfast tea, forgetting those are indian leaves one and half teaspoons each of sugar grain bought at asda, barbadian cane husband fries eggs, wife waters wisteria cooking oil from italy, heating oil nigeria ..... swallow two pills each to help bowels and digestion invented by a research team of u.s and indians newspapers flicked through, headlines are read: says: 'more crime, more violence, less hospital beds' she complains to husband, he complains to wife they complain it must be those foreigners ruining lives voting polls open; farage is ticked pen bought from staples, iranian ink they drive on roads laid by irish jamaicans she sprays on perfume, an arab invention complaining about foreigners joining country forgetting the source of dear british money
